Know Your Employee (KYE)

Q5id
You. Proven.

The importance of proving who your new hires truly are in a world of remote workers and the identity fraud epidemic.

Going beyond traditional ID verification

Current identity verification assumes when a person provides an ID, that ID is real and correct to that person. The flaw with this practice is the assumption that IDs such as a driver's license or social security card can easily be verified, but this does not prove the person who presents the document is the person on the document.

KYE emerges as a critical expansion of employee verification

KYE by Q5id goes beyond traditional ID verification by proving the identity of the person, not just verifying the provided ID. A primary goal of KYE is protection. By knowing your employee before they are hired, you can help protect your organization, employees, customers, and reputation.

This is especially relevant in today's age of remote and work-from-home positions where an organization may never meet the employee in person. In 2022, the FBI warned job applicants are using identity fraud when applying for remote positions.

The cost of a bad hire: it's not just about the wages

According to Glassdoor, the average U.S. employer spends about $4,000 and 24 days to hire a new employee. But there are additional costs and potential damages beyond the salary and recruiting costs. New hires gain access to an organization's proprietary information exposing themselves to financial and reputational risks.

Information that may now be accessed by new hires can include:

- Financial data
- Intellectual property (IP)
- Trade secrets
- Customers' Personally Identifiable Information (PII)

The patented technology behind how KYE by Q5id Proven Identity combats identity fraud

KYE by Q5id uses our patented Proven Identity solution, leveraging multiple biometrics, AI, liveness testing, and our unique IP. Our solution can detect deepfake spoofing, use of synthetics, and even the use of general ID theft, preventing the user from obtaining a verified proven identity. Without this proven identity, your applicant would not be able to proceed in your hiring process. Our patented solution delivers the highest level of assurance that each person is who they say they are with a false acceptance rate of 1 in 933 billion.
